Introduction about your institution	Hanoi Architectural University (HAU), established in 1969, is Vietnam's leading architectural university under the administration of the Ministry of Architecture, now the Ministry of Construction. HAU prides itself on being the top-ranked institution in architecture, engineering, art design, and management education. It currently enrolls around 15,000 undergraduates and 1,100 graduates across 10 faculties and 5 training institutes, including Architecture, Urban and Rural Planning, Civil Engineering, Urban Management, Interior Design, Fashion Design, Graphic Design, Sculpture, Information Technology, and Multimedia. HAU's academic staff consists of renowned researchers and educators in the construction industry, with numerous publications, teaching materials, and state, ministerial, and university-level research projects. The university's main campus is located in Hanoi, with a secondary campus in Phuc Yen city, 30 km away. HAU is dedicated to preserving its history and tradition while advancing as a prestigious higher education and research institution in Vietnam. Its mission is to become a national leader in training professionals in scientific and technical fields, including Architecture, Planning, Construction, and Applied Arts. HAU strives to provide high-quality human resources to drive national development and international integration, establishing itself as a centre of excellence in scientific and technical education.
Area(s) you would like to partner with UK institutions	Research; TNE; Student Exchange; Activities relate to arts and design;
Please provide more information about your expected collaboration in these areas with UK institutions	We have established collaborations with esteemed UK institutions such as the University of Nottingham, the University of Huddersfield, the University for Creative Arts, and the University of Hertfordshire, among others. These partnerships are vital in enhancing the academic and research environment at HAU, facilitating the exchange of knowledge, expertise, and resources. Our cooperation includes the development of articulation programs, which allow students to begin their studies at HAU and complete their degrees at our partner universities in the UK. We also regularly organize joint workshops, seminars, and conferences to promote dialogue on academic and research advancements. These events provide valuable opportunities for faculty and students to engage in discussions on emerging trends in architecture, design, and related fields. Additionally, HAU is committed to developing curriculum and research quality through these collaborations. UK professors frequently visit HAU to deliver guest lectures, sharing their insights and experiences with our students and staff. Conversely, HAU faculty members have visited the UK campuses of our partners to learn from their academic practices and explore new teaching and research methodologies. Each year, we host meetings with representatives from these universities to review our partnership progress, discuss future initiatives, and strengthen our collaborative efforts for mutual growth.

Your institution's experience in collaboration with foreign partner universities	Hanoi Architectural University (HAU) has a dedicated unit called the Institute of International Training and Cooperation (IITC), responsible for managing all international cooperation and training activities. Currently, HAU offers five international training programs in foreign languages, including four undergraduate programs (two in English and two in French), one Master's program (in French), and one Doctoral program (in French). The university is also working to expand its graduate programs in English. HAU actively engages in various forms of international collaboration, such as workshops, short courses, student exchanges, seminars, and conferences with global partners to enhance the quality of its training and research. Lecturers from HAU participate in teaching and research activities at partner institutions worldwide, including the USA, Italy, France, Thailand, and Laos. Similarly, international lecturers and students from countries such as France, the USA, Spain, Korea, Germany, and Italy also contribute to teaching and studying at HAU, fostering an international training and research environment. HAU receives support from international organizations to establish a quality assurance system in management and training, improving overall effectiveness. As higher education continues to evolve, HAU aims to play a pivotal role in training, strengthening the university's reputation both domestically and internationally.
