

Looking for British partner universities – Aoyama Gakuin University in Tokyo

Aoyama Gakuin University is currently looking for British partner universities for student exchanges, lasting for one or two academic semesters. This is due to expanding demand from our students to study in the UK. Our student exchange scheme for incoming students provides six level Japanese language courses, and faculty-advisor and student-buddy systems to help incoming international students. Incoming exchange students can also take regular academic courses, among which 30 – 40 courses are taught in English every semester. Incoming exchange students must meet the following conditions:

- A minimum score of N5 in the JLPT or an equivalent level of Japanese proficiency
- Academic standings equivalent to a lower-second or above

Below is our school profile:

Aoyama Gakuin, which was founded by missionaries from the Methodist Episcopal Church, marks its 140th anniversary in 2014. The University, the largest institute in Aoyama Gakuin, has two campuses with a total enrolment of around 20,000 students. Aoyama Campus, located in the Shibuya area of central Tokyo, is home to seven faculties in the fields of arts/humanities and social sciences. Two faculties in the fields of science/technology and social informatics are based just outside of Tokyo at Sagamiara Campus, with its state-of-the art-research laboratories. AGU cultivates individuals with strong ethics and social values, in accordance with its educational policy on the Christian faith.
